WITHDRAWAL OF WAGE DEPOSIT CONSENT

To: Example Employer
From: Robin Example
Notice date: 2026-11-03

I withdraw consent to future wage credits to the account at Example Prior Bank identified by the last four characters 1234. My other wage deposit instructions remain in effect. Please act on receipt for credits that have not yet been transmitted.

My current information is that the affected deposit has not yet been transmitted. Please check with payroll and confirm the change.

Please confirm which lawful payment options are available to me.

Please acknowledge receipt promptly, identify any affected entry already sent, and confirm the payment method for my next payday. This notice does not waive my right to timely payment of earned wages or give anyone permission to debit my account. It does not require me to leave an old or compromised account open.

Arizona wage deposit. Arizona Revised Statutes §§23-350 and 23-351(E) cover employment contracts made in Arizona or to be performed wholly or partly there. For wage deposits under the statute, an employee may revoke consent before the employer transmits the deposit to the institution. Asking the employer to confirm the file status does not extend that point. Sections 23-351(D) and (H) address the available payment methods, including an employer payroll card when the employee has not designated a financial institution. This notice does not guarantee a paper check.
